on all unpopular candidate, are called very amusing. Quite significant is the meaning generally attached to this bye-election, which is that if a general election were held by a large level. to-day, home rule would carry by a large majority.

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.) LONDON, January 19 .- The Grand Old Man must have slept the sweet placid sleep of babyhood last night, for just before he had crawled into his bed in Naples a telegram came to tell him of a knock-down blow to the Tories and a thumping victory for Gladstone, Parnell, home rule and virtue in general. Govan is a Scotch district.

and the Tories foully hoped it was theirs for good and all. They not only carried it at the Parliamentary election in 1886, but also in 1885, when Gladstone was supposed to be strongest. This morning the Tory landlord and his mugwump Unionist brother had their day spoiled by the news that yesterday's election had replaced the Tory majority of 362 by a home rule majority of 1,071. The attempts of the Tory press to wriggle out of the crushing defeat are more humorous than usual, and go to swell the pleasant sensation of the Home Rulers, the magnitude of whose victory surprises them almost as much as it does the Tories. The only resource of the latter is to roundly abuse poor Sir John Pender, their defeated candidate, as unfit for the place, a nice, gentlemanly habit which, by the way, is rather charac-teristic of the Tory English gentleman of whom we hear so much about.

WHAT THIS ELECTION MEANS. This is the most significant of all the byeelections. It means, in plain English and beyond all doubt, that in the present state of public opinion, a general election would mean a tremendoms victory for Grand Old Gladstone, and a chance for the Irish to manage their own national affairs.

A most important political happening, such as must have tremendously excited any other big town, has just been witnessed here, it. I mean the substitution of the County Council for the corrupt Board of Works, which run things before. The importance of this change lies in the fact that London is now threatened with a government in the is now threatened with a government in the interests of the masses of its inhabitants, and not of its proprietors. The change is a Tory measure, but it looks very much as though the Tories would very soon find in Mr. Ritchie, with his local government bill, a dark-complexioned Frankenstein of a most obnoxious type.

The Grand Old Man didn't fight the bill, a fact which some complained of, but it will soon be seen that on that occasion Gladstone proved himself foxy as well as grand and old. He allowed the Tories freely to legislate themselves into very hot water. ENOUGH TO FRET THE TORIES.

ors, if they are true to their colors, will fight to take the control of the police away from the Home Secretary; to tax ground rents—a very painful thing for the Tory land owners; to appropriate the endowments of turtle-eating city companies-a painful thing for big-bodied business magnates; to have water, gas and tramway companies controlled by the city; to have the public admitted to the meetings of the Council, and to effect numerous other gravely revolutionary and common sense reforms.

The Council is a queer body, with none of the uniformity of character observed in the traditional Board of Works or Aldermanic body. Lord Roseberry, who is as radical as any lord married to a Rothschild can very well be, is a member, and will probably be President of the Council. Lady Saudhurst and Miss Cobden, daughter of the anti-protection celebrity, have both been elected, but while women are allowed to vote, it is not quite settled whether they can be members of the Council.

Mr. Barns, a good type of a Socialist, who takes life easy at night, but works hard all day for a living, is elected, and so is Gus Harris, manager of Drury Lane Theater, and by long odds the most widely adver-tised man in England. It will be interesting to watch this legislature, probably the queerest ever brought together, and see how its different elements will get on.

Two Famous Artists Can't Agree as to Which Slapped the Other. (BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)

LONDON, January 19 .- I have received a copy of a letter sent to the editor of Independence Belge, in which the artist William Stott denies the version given by Whistler to their row at the Hogarth Club. Whistler, who is a small man, and not of a physique that would be ordinarily thought a powerful one, says that he slapped Stott thoroughly and threw him out because Stott had called him a liar and other things. Stott, in his letter, says that Whistler proves the charge made against him by his version of the

It was Whistler, says Stott, who was slapped and otherwise injured, and Stott gives him credit for taking his lesson more gently than he could have hoped. Stott writes from Paris, so that if Whistler wishes writes from Paris, so that if Whistler wishes to slap him any more as a punishment for his last accusation he will have to make a journey. Pittsburg Manufacturers Say Their Business

We respectfully request that you grant as duty 70 per cent ad valorem on the accompanying schedule, including sections 109 and 110 (which relate to fancy glassware, cut bottles, etc.). This rate duty will not, by any means, give us full relief, as you can readily see, but it will belp us very materially and is perhaps all we should ask for at present. We believe a specific duty on these glass goods would be the principal method of affording relief. In regard to cut glassware and shades we would call your attention to the fact that this branch of the glass industry has been on the wane for several attention to the fact that this branch of the glass industry has been on the wane for several years. FAMOUS MEN AT HARRISBURG.

The Red-Headed and Hopeful Leader in State Politics.

A MAN WHO SMILES BUT SAYS NOTHING

Moral but Not Very Hard-Working House of Repre sentatives.

THE DISPATCH'S staff correspondent at Harrisburg gives below a few graphic sketches of the famous men who are members of or in attendance upon" the State Legislature.

[FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.] HARRISBURG, January 19 .- There undoubtedly was a time when the Senator from Delaware was aptly described as "redheaded and hopeful." Hopeful he may yet be, and he confronts the situation with as bold a front as ever, but inexorable Time is at work with its bleaching process and the Senatorial hair indicates that it is not proof against the insidious influence. The tuft on the Senatorial chin is no longer gorgeous ation betrays not the slightest weakening and his speech of Wednesday night in the Republican joint caucus shows that his leadership is not relinquished, that he refuses to take a back seat and that his pre-eminence is recognized even by those whose political interest would dispute it. The speech he made was the speech of a leader, and the members of the Republican joint caucus accepted it as the law and the gospel of Re ublican policy.

A few of the more ardent temperance people considered it impolitic in its reference to high license as against prohibition, but that it was sound doctrine from a Republican standpoint is practically all but

DELAMATER DON'T TALK.

Senator Delamater, of Meadville, who is generally looked on as United States Senator Quay's candidate for Governor Beaver's place, faithfully follows the lead of the National Chairman in his policy of saying little and listening a great deal.
Two years ago Senator Delamater talked more. Now, while pleasant and kindly, greeting newspaper men with a warm handshake, a smile and a pleasant word, he is uncommunicative on a great many points the correspondents would like to have the privilege of placing in print. Senator Delamater is tall, dark, dignified, handsome and wears glasses, and is in strong contrast to his rival from Delaware. The new Republican Chairman sits in the House in a good scat in the third row, from which it is no trouble whatever to eatch the eye of the Speaker as it roves discriminat-ingly around the chamber. Mr. Andrews, however, does not do business with the Speaker's eye to any great extent, but gazes calmly, good-naturedly and smilingly on the legislative gathering.

ANDREWS' SMILE. The policy of silence has also been adopted by him and seems to fit as naturally as the smile which so frequently plays about his mouth and makes his heavy about his mouth and makes his heavy mustache curl in an entertaining way. Chairman Andrews is possessed of considerable adipose tissue of the jovial kind, and will need all his patience and good nature if he continues at the head of the Republican committee beyond the present year.

Captain Brown, of Beaver, siu in a front seat, slightly to the right of the Speaker. Captain Dravo, who represents the same county, sits in the third block to Captain Brown's right, one row back, just behind Mr. Brooks, who rode into fame on the high license bill. Captain Brown, by request, introduced what is known as the American Mechanics' flag bill, but has proved a model

AN ABLE JOURNALIST. Among the best known people of Harris-burg seen about the State Capitol buildings is the modest but energetic President of the Editorial Association, Thomas M. Jones, the city editor of the Harrisburg Evening Tele-graph. Mr. Jones was elected at the recent meeting of the association and was given the compliment of a unanimous vote! Hollidaysburg, Blair county, is the place that gave birth, in 1850, to this able representa-tive of Keystone journalism. Harrisburg's schools gave him his education, and here he learned the art of printing. An experience as editor of a paper at Ridgway, Elk coun-ty, ended in 1871, and in 1872 Mr. Jones found himself a compositor on the Harris-burg Telegraph, of which paper he has been city editor since 1877. New York, Philaboro Bank, committed suicide by hanging delphia and Pittsburg papers are proud to own him as their correspondent, and it is one of his boasts that he can call more pub-lic men by their first name without giving offense than any newspaper man in Penn-sylvania. Mr. Jones has been touched lightly by the years that have passed him by, and his personal appearance is such that the fair sex casts many sidelong glances at him as he goes by. AN EXPERT GRAPHOPHONIST.

No man in the Department of State has more calls on his time and good temper than R. F. Cromelin, the handsome stenographer. It is a never-failing pleasure to him to exhibit the wonders of his graphophone to astonished visitors. Mr. Cromelin's own talks and songs recorded on the magic cylinders are not the least entertaining things of his collection, and he adds to them reci-tations by Bill Nye and James Whitcomb Riley, with some fine samples of the whistling of Mrs. Shaw. It is one of the features of the State Department.

The personal morals of the present House of Representatives will compare favorably with any. The public morals of the body have not yet had time to develop. There are very few members who insert the contents of a distillery into their stomachs to make it work itself to death in the effort to discover whether they have any brains carefully concealed about their persons. Only one member has given public evidence of intoxication on the floor of the House, and he didn't do anything serious. of the State Department.

he didn't do anything serious. BROOKS AND BILLINGSLEY. Representatives Brooks and Billingsley sit beside each other in the House. The name of each graced bills that excited the State, and though the best of friends then

State, and though the best of friends then and now, each voted against the bill of the other when on the same day they came up for final passage.

Representative Wherry, of Cumberland, who received the Democratic caucus nomination for Speaker of the House, is one of the best posted men on the floor, and one of the best parliamentarians. He was the youngest member of the convention that framed the new Constitution, and should therefore know something of what its intentions were. Concerning the very important tions were. Concerning the very important matter of municipal legislation he states that it was not the intention of the con-vention that the Legislature should pass
